Grocer—His Alleged Marriage
Cook Under an Assumed Hariage
Man Death and the Sec

Before Hon. Gidson J. Tucker, Burrogate.
The hearing in the of the application of the alleged widow of Basic Absents, for leaser of administron, which will be recommer cod on Monday last, has been postponed until next we as eving to the sickness of Surrogate Tucker. This was a one of more than usual interest, and justifies the sected of the testimony which has been to a ministration. The story of the petitioner, if it as, unfolds a ourious chapter in the life of a man whe for many years carried on business in this city, as prevent the value of the old saying, "truth after all 1 a tranger than fiction." Many an interesting novel by a been worked out of materials far less interesting, and atrange than the circumstances already de-who claims to be his widow was from Ireland, and for many years followed the vocation of a cook in the employment of several private families in this city. The two became acquainted through a mutual friend, and an astachment appears to have immediately sprung up between them. Angevine, under the assumed name of Young, visited his fair isomerate at her various places of employment, receiving him in the scene of her mennial labors in the kitchen. After a ourtship of considerable length they were finally married at the house of a Methodst clergyman in Twenty-first street. After heing duly united in wedlock the coupled lived apart from each other, unlike man and wife, enjoying only a species of Plauonic affection. The husband visited her as a brother would a sister, and went out walking with her day and evening. After the hapse of five years they went to housekeping, and lived tegether in a secluded manner until a day or so before the death of the husband. The whole story is told in a very plain, simple manner by the wife, in her examination before the Surrogate. The following is an abstract of her testimony prepared by our reporter:—

Bernelle, the changed The whole singly and in a fine the changed of the strategy. The following is an abstract of the instance, proposed by any representations of the instance, proposed by any representations of the instance, proposed as store at the corner of Spring and the instance of the control of the

that was the reason we did not live together; from the marriage ceremony I went home to Mr. Pennoyer's house, and Mr. Angevine went away; for five years we had no connection together; during that time he gave me money any time I wanted it to buy clothes for me; he has often come and offered me money, and I did not want it; I was attached to him, and he was a very kind husband; always treated me well and the children; he died at his mother's house; when I went there I saked to see the corpse, and was taken in to see it; there were four ladies in the parlor where the corpse was lying; my little girl was with me; they asked me who I was; I told them they would know by and by; they then asked my little girl who was in the coffin, and she said it was her father; then the lady asked me again, and I said yos, that is my husband; my husband always complained of pain in his chest and throat; he often said he would die a sudden death.

The rest of her testimony is not of a character interceting to the public. Some three other witnesses for the petitioner have been examined, but their evidence does not appear to be of any particular importance. During the proceedings on Tuesday the Rev. Mr. J. B. Hagany, pastor of the church in which the marriage records of the church a certified copy of the marriage records of the church a certified copy of the marriage records of the church a certified copy of the marriage records of the church a certified copy of the marriage records of the church a certified copy of the marriage between Ann McGrarlan and James Young, corresponding exactly in date and otherwise with her testimony of the petitioner.

The case will probably go on next week, on Wednesday offfurnday. The contestants against the alleged widow are Levi Angevine, brother of deceased, and Nelson Duckworth. The deceased was worth about six thousand dollars in personal property. His death occurred on the 18th of March, 1864. He was forty-six years of appearance in her youth. She has three children leving.

The testimony so far i

The testimony so far is, of course, all one-sided. Next seek the contestants will open.
